Outlook: A RED FLAG WATCH has been posted for eastern Idaho and western Wyoming for dry thunderstorms. Strong high pressure extends from eastern Arizona north through the Rocky Mountain states. Low pressure off the Washington coast will slowly drift to the northeast. Most of the western states will be under a moist southerly flow resulting in widespread thunderstorms from the desert southwest to and southern Sierras through much of the Great Basin and Rocky Mountain states. Thunderstorms will be wet in the Southwest, southern Great Basin and Rocky Mountain Areas. Thunderstorms in eastern Idaho and western Wyoming will generally be dry. Western Idaho will remain dry. Cooler temperatures and scattered showers will move into Washington and western Oregon. Cooler temperatures and showers that are forecast should bring some relief to the large fires in Washington. Fire activity in the Great Basin and Northern Rockies is expected to continue and possibly increase with forecasted dry lightning.

NORTHERN ALASKA FIRE WEATHER FORECAST FOR MONDAY, AUGUST 8 1994
 NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE FAIRBANKS ALASKA
 ISSUED 9:30 AM ADT MONDAY

WEATHER SYNOPSIS AND MAP DISCUSSION.

An upper level disturbance has pushed east into the eastern Interior this morning triggering some light showers and fueling thunderstorm activity through the night near the Alcan. This disturbance will continue to drift east and weaken as it moves into the upper ridge that extends from the Gulf of Alaska into the Yukon. Warmer and drier weather should again expand west over the Interior for the midweek period as high pressure reestablishes itself. The west coast will continue cool and wet as a series of disturbances move northeast out of the Bering Sea.

MAX. TEMP..70's
