Narrative: At 1522 Alaska Fire Service personnel who were prepositioned at the Donnelly Training Area East Military Range reported a new fire located on the Arkansas Range. The fire, consisting of two small spots, was approximately 1/10th acre in size and smoldering in grass. The fire was ignited by small arms fire tracer rounds during military training activities on the range. AFS personnel were able to keep the fire from spreading but limited suppression was achieved due to continued military training on the range. The fire was placed in monitor status.
