Narrative: Fire management staff at the Wrangell-St. Elias National Park and Preserve will burn piles of debris consisting of trees and brush from May 21, through May 25, 2012. Burning of piles may occur at anytime during the above dates. The pile burn locations are NPS structures at the Chisana airstrip, Klawasi backcountry cabin and Big Bend Lake. Ignition of the piles will occur during the morning and last until the afternoon. Smoke may be visible if you are in the vicinity of these areas. National Park Service fire management staff will be on site managing the burn. The burn piles resulted from a hazardous fuels treatment project that occurred on the properties during the summer of 2011.

As of 1215 5/23, 2 acres of piles had been burned and declared out by the NPS IC. No further burning operations are currently planned for this RX, as inclement weather is hindering burn operations.

Narrative: Report of a wildland fire caused by a hay bale that fell off a railroad car, and started a fire in the grass and leaf litter. Fire was found by Alaska Railroad employees and they believed they had extinguished the fire, but wanted a Forestry unit to respond and check the fire area. A Forestry engine and prevention responded and after searching a few dirt roads, located the fire area which was approximately ½ acre in size. Personnel checked the fire and after finding no heat and no smokes, declared the fire out.

Fairbanks #1 continued cold trailing the perimeter 20-30 feet in. White Mountain continued working with hot spots and hazard trees. All the heat was found under downed logs and stumps and by mid afternoon the crews were gridding. The hose was removed from the fire area. The plan is to continue gridding and demob by late afternoon 5/24.
