At 1830 a US Customs Agent called Forestry to report a couple lightning strikes had started two small fires along the Alaska Highway. Helitack and one engine responded and found the two fires had grown into one. The merged fires were 10 acres burning in the tundra. Due to the fire being reported as fast growing and approaching the highway, Air Attack and two Fire Bosses were ordered. Helitack was able to take care of the fire with bucket work and the fixed wings were cancelled. The fire was called contained and controlled, and will be placed in monitor status.
