The fire received precipitation last night, with fog over the fire this morning and this afternoon including several rain events that assisted with cooling down of hot spots. No more rain is expected tonight. The forecast calls for less cloud cover tomorrow and heavy rain Saturday night into Monday.

Today, smokejumpers continued gridding and found a few hot spots. They released H361EH back to Galena for the night @ 1945 and will expect them back tomorrow.

Tomorrow, smokejumpers will check the fire in the morning and begin breaking things down for demobilization.

Sunday the rest of the hose and supplies will be demobilized and they will start packing up camp to be ready for demobilization of the eight smokejumpers remaining on the fire on Monday.
